COURT OF REVISION.

Notice is hereby given that the Court of Revision for the Municipality of the Town of Napanee will be held in the Council Chamber, in the Town Hall, on Tuesday, the 26th day of November, 1912, at the hour of 7.30 p.m. for the hearing of the appeals against the Assessment Roll of 1912. All persons interested are required to

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
Nov. 18th, 1912.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Waller in the chair.

Present - Reeve Alexander and Councillors Simpson, Osborne, Carson, Denison, Dickinson, and Madill.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from W. S. Herrington, town solicitor, giving his opinion on the question of the town granting a sum of money toward repairing the bridge crossing the river below the falls. In his opinion it was a dangerous precedent to establish, to say nothing of the granting of public moneys, when no provisions were made in the estimates, also there was no authority given in the Municipal Act for an expenditure of this kind. He suggested that the council would be wise in making no grant.

Communication ordered filed.

A request was made from the members of the fire brigade for their salary.

On motion of Reeve Alexander and Coun. Madill the request was granted and the amount ordered placed on the pay roll.

A communication was read from the National Sanitarium Association asking for aid.

Ordered laid on the table.

Reeve Alexander presented the Treasurer's regular monthly statement in reference to the finances of the town.

Report adopted.

Coun. Dickinson, chairman of Fire, Water and Light Committee, presented a report of his committee recommending: 1-That the Waterworks Co's. account, amounting to $800.15, be paid; 2-That the arc lamp at the corner of Belleville road and Thomas street be replaced with a 60 c. p. lamp, a 60 c. p. lamp be placed at the corner of Graham street and Belleville road, also one at the corner of Thomas and Bridge street, one on the Selby road north of the G.T.R. Centre street crossing, and one at Mr. Fennell's corner near Riverside cemetery.

The report showed that the cost of these different lights would only be $9.00 in excess of the present arc lamp at the Belleville road and Thomas street corner, and in the opinion of the committee the changes would be a decided improvement.

Report adopted.

GREAT MUSICAL EVENT.
Queen's Hall Concert Organist Plays Here Next Week.

Gatty Sellars, the Great English Organist Composer, of the Queen's Hall London (Eng.) Concerts and the Crystal Palace Musical Festival, is to appear in recitals at Trinity Methodist Church next Wednesday and Friday. This will be his 310th recital given in direct succession on his present Trans-continental Tour, constituting a "World's Record." He has appeared on the largest organs of Canada and the United States and has attracted the largest audiences in the history of many of the larger cities visited. At Salt Lake City Mormon Tabernacle with its seating capacity of 10,000 and possessing one of the world's greatest organs, he was greeted with an immense audience. This was also the case at Los Angeles Auditorium (the largest re-inforced concrete structure in the world) with its $30,000 organ, and at Topeka, Kansas, Auditorium where 4,500 heard the recital. His 250th performance was at the largest Presbyterian Church in the world (Seattle, Wash.) possessing the sister organ of the Los Angeles one. However Mr. Sellars considers Canada leads in Organ Building, one of our Canadian firms having what he thinks "the finest action in the world" at the present time. His program, apart from the usual masterpieces, includes the descriptive number "The Russian Patrol" representing the approach, passing by, and gradual disappearance of a Russian Patrol, in which is heard the drums, trumpets and the tramp of the soldiers. In his "Storm at Sea" the world's press declare he obtains the most remarkable effects ever heard on a pipe organ, so vividly is the rain, wind, thunder and lightning produced? The most important selection, however, is the Coronation music as performed at Westminster Abbey at the Coronation of King George V and Queen Mary, including the Coronation Marches. In this arrangement Cathedral Chimes from the Queen's Hall, London, will be used with the organ. There will be an entire change of program each evening, and seeing that the large Presbyterian Church, Brockville, was all too small to accommodate the audience the other night a crowded church is anticipated next Wednesday at the popular admission of 25 cents. The recital is under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid.

William Brisbin, one of the staunchest of the old liberals of Northumberland county, has passed away at his home in Alnwick, in his eighty-third year.

MAY CHANGE METHODS

American Laborites May Adopt Industrial Unionism.

Resolution at Federation of Labor Congress Favors a Policy of Organization by Industries Instead of by Crafts In Order to Fight the Strong Body of Manufacturers in the United States.

Rochester, Nov. 19.—The question whether the American Federation of Labor is to adopt industrial unionism in place of its present policy of recognizing, except in certain instances, the autonomy of trade or craft organizations will be discussed to-day. Near the close of yesterday afternoon's meeting the committee on education reported on a resolution for the adoption of industrial unionism. A majority of the committee voted for its rejection and a minority report favored industrial unionism where practicable, and where not practicable a loose federation of trade unions for unified action.

The resolution was introduced by John Mitchell, Duncan McDonald, John P. White, Frank J. Hayes, Wm. Green and J. H. Walker of the United Mine Workers of America, and is as follows:

"Whereas, the lines are being more closely drawn between capital and labor, and,

"Whereas, the capitalists of the country have organized the National Manufacturers' Association and other large employers' organizations, compact, cohesive bodies, having for their purpose the destruction of the trades' union movement, and realizing that in unity there is strength, therefore, be it

Resolved, that in order to combat these compact and powerful organizations of employers of labor, this convention adopts and endorses the plan of organization by industries instead of by crafts, which often divides the forces of labor and that the officers of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to use every effort to bring this about and that they visit the different labor conventions and use their influence to

MAY GIVE $50,000.

Province Likely to Assist National Sanitarium Association.

Toronto, Nov. 19.—It was learned from authoritative circles yesterday that the Provincial Government might help the fight against consumption by making a grant of $50,000 to the National Sanitarium Association. This fund will not be placed at the disposal of the association to help swell its building and endowment funds, but to be devoted wholly to research work.

The fight being waged since 1896 has been towards effecting the cure of consumption rather than prevention of infection, and it has been definitely decided that this department should be developed.

It was decided at the recent convention of medical officers of health that the disease was being treated in such a manner as to not sufficiently prevent its spread, and that something should be done towards trying to effect some improvement in the matter of scientific research work.

Advocates of the granting of $250,000 by the city to the National Sanitarium Association turned up in force at the City Hall yesterday, headed by Lieutenant-Governor Sir John Gibson, W. J. Gage, A. P. Gourlay, Hugh Blain, W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., Ambrose Kent and Hon. W. A. Charlton, who appeared before the council at yesterday's meeting, to urge that body to submit the money by-law covering the amount asked for, which the council subsequently did.

The speakers emphasized the fact that they wish the city to control the administration of the civic grant, even going so far as to advocate that they construct special quarters for Toronto patients, and the extra $400,000 to be collected to complete the King Edward Memorial Fund.

By a unanimous vote it was decided to submit the vote to the electorate on Jan. 1.

The majority of the committee desired to substitute for the resolution the autonomy declaration of the Scranton convention in 1901, which favored the retention of the policy of recognizing and maintaining craft or trade autonomy insofar as it was compatible with modern organization of industry. By special order of the convention, discussion of the resolution was set for to-day, directly following the discussion of the influence of the Sherman anti-trust law on the labor movement.

Man and Wife Nearly Killed.

Woodstock, Nov. 19.—H. G. Benfield, a prominent cattle dealer of Oxford County, and his wife, had a narrow escape from asphyxiation by gas early yesterday morning, and it required several hours for doctors to bring them around.

At an early hour Mr. Benfield awoke in a semi-conscious condition and discovered that the room was full of gas. He endeavored to rouse his wife, but she had lapsed into unconsciousness.

Mr. Benfield then attempted to get out of the room, but he fell to the floor, striking his head and inflicting a serious gash. He continued in his efforts to leave the room, but fell again in the hallway. The noise awakened other members of the household, who found Mr. Benfield lying prostrate in the hall and Mrs. Benfield unconscious on the bed.

Both were quite ill as a result of their experience.

Federal Square for Toronto.

Toronto, Nov. 19.—It is understood that the Federal Government will bring down estimates covering the cost of the proposed federal square, at the session which opens next week. The area lying between the City Hall and Osgoode Hall, and extending two blocks north, will be the site of the new Government buildings.

In the federal square will be located the buildings of the Department of Agriculture, Inland Revenue, Public Works, Immigration, the Receiver-General's office, and the new post-office, weights and measures and other branches. There will also be a small park area, to provide a breathing place in that congested portion of the city.

Killed by Train.

Belleville, Nov. 19.—Frank Philips, a widower, aged 45 years, whose home was at Canifon village, near this city, was killed Sunday on the line at the Central Ontario Railway, near Bancroft. It is said the man attempted to cross the track and misjudged the distance of the train from him. An inquest will be held.

"Honest" Joe Fined.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 19.—For selling liquor after seven o'clock last Saturday, "Honest" Joe Spencer, proprietor of the Maple Leaf Hotel, and a horseman of more than local fame, was fined $75 in police court yesterday. When this city police raided the hotel they found thirteen foreigners there.

in the House of Commons was brought about yesterday when the dispute as to the Government's method of procedure which led to such disorder last week, was settled.

The Government announced yesterday afternoon the intention of reaching the end desired by a more round-about means, and the Unionists, having made good their demand for the observance of precedent, raised no objection.

Premier Asquith attributed his change of mind partly to repugnance at the possible recurrence of disorder, and partly to a desire not to ignore the appeal of the chair."

The House of Commons then, on the motion of the Premier, negatived its original financial resolution, proposed by Sir Richard Banbury, the passing of which in committee, led to the trouble. Another resolution will be substituted for it.

The net result of the squabble will be to delay the progress of the home rule bill for ten days.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

That is the nature of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the one remedy for women which contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots. Dr. Pierce tells its every ingredient on the bottle-wrapper. Prominent physicians and some of the best medical authorities endorse these ingredients as being the very best known remedies for ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women.

MRS. COFFEY.

This is what MRS. GENETTI E. COFFEY, of Longstreet, Ky., says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you what your medicines have done for me. I was a great sufferer for six years from a trouble peculiar to women, but I am thankful to say, after taking four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am not bothered with that dreadful disease any more. I feel like a new woman. When I first wrote you for advice I only weighed 115 pounds—now I weigh 135.

"I thank you very much for your kindness. You have been as a father to me in advising me what to do, so may God bless you in every effort you put forth for good.

"I hope this testimonial will be the means of some poor suffering woman seeking health."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition, answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know.

SOME BIG PENSIONS.

Drawing a State Allowance of $750 For Sixty-One Years.

A feature of Government service, which undoubtedly has a great attraction for many people, is that one is sure of a pension after a stipulated number of years' service, or if ill-health or old age compels a retirement—that is, of course, providing the character of the worker has been satisfactory.

At the present time the state is paying 4,079 people pensions which total $3,519,000 per year. These pensions cover all branches of the Civil Service, the greatest number of pensioners being those of the English and colonial prison departments. There are no fewer than 1,522 pensions being paid to former warders, clerks, matrons, storekeeper, gatekeepers, foremen, etc., in our prisons. The pensions range from $6 per annum paid to a former assistant-warder after one year's service to $3,600 for a commissioner after forty-one years' service.

In several instances the prison pensions have been given after only four years' service, mainly on account, however, of the abolition of certain departments; but as a rule a pension has not been granted, except in the case of ill-health, under twenty-five to thirty years' service, and in many cases between forty and fifty years' service has been given to the state before receiving a pension.

Then there are 460 pensions, totalling $350,000, paid in connection with former services in public offices in Ireland, while 222 former employes in public offices in Scotland are receiving $160,000 per year.

Among the miscellaneous pensions which are paid by the state might be mentioned $3,800 per year which is paid to Sir E. Thorpe, who, after thirty-one years' service as Principal Government Chemist, retired at the age of sixty-three. Then $4,000 superannuation allowance is paid to Mr. R. O. B. Lane, K.C., the well-known Metropolitan police magistrate, while a superannuation allowance of $1,600 is made to Sir C. R. Wilson, former Suez Canal Director, who also receives a pension of $4,500 a year as late Secretary and Controller-General of the National Debt Office.

Altogether there are thirty-two pensioners in connection with the diplomatic services, whose yearly allowance range from $200 paid to Rev. F. R. Elliot, former chaplain at the Athens Legation, to $8,500 paid to

SHE MAKES IT WORTH WHILE.

English Woman Breeds and Trains Eskimo Dogs For the Market.

Throughout the world there are many men and women who find employment in raising something or other out of the ordinary in plant or animal life. Just at present there is a Mrs. Scott who conducts a dog farm at Grove Park, one of the suburbs of London. Her specialty is Eskimo dogs which she breeds and trains for the market. Although the market for this sort of the canine family is not very large, yet it is sufficient to make it worth while to this lady, due to the manner in which she trains the dogs for Arctic explorations.

Eskimo dogs are absolutely essential when journeying in the Arctic regions. Good Eskimo dogs can be obtained in Greenland, or in Alaska, but they cannot be exported from the former place except by special permission of the Danish Government and Alaskan dogs are not classed in the good variety.

A great trouble with ordinary Eskimo dogs is that they have no breeding and no discipline. They will obey the master with whom they have been brought up, but when they start after fish or other game, even their master can control them only by the exercise of brute force. The desired dogs for exploration purposes are those that will obey orders given by a white man; dogs that are broken into harness and are not afraid of work, dogs that have learned team work.

It is just this kind of dogs that Mrs. Scott raises for the market. Her kennels have only pure-blooded animals of carefully selected stock and from earliest puppyhood she trains them in how to eat and how to work. When she gets through with an Eskimo dog the animal is not nearly so ferocious as one that just "grewed up" in the surroundings of an Eskimo village. They adapt themselves quickly to new masters and they have acquired good eating manners, so that they are not so likely to attack the cupboard or fresh game.

Mrs. Scott feeds her animals no meat except pemmican and dried fish brought from Norway; a large part of the diet is a specially prepared biscuit. Her trained dogs are specially desired by Arctic and Antarctic expeditions and she has supplied many of these with dogs from her kennels.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Windsor Record—If the C. P. R. strike collapses Hon. Tom Crothers may have the nerve to take credit for settling it.

Hamilton Times—Sir Sydney Whitney and Dr. Pyne are off on a junketing trip to the old country. The Spec. ought to get its yellow dog after them.

St. Thomas Times—Four New York policemen have been suspended for sleeping while on duty. Why not let them sleep and keep them out of mischief?

Ottawa Journal—The Unionist party is taking a leaf out of the book of the militant suffragettes. Such methods can be better explained than excused.

St. Thomas Times.—Amazed war experts of Europe are now declaring that Bulgaria kept her military strength a secret until the actual outbreak of hostilities. Shockingly discourteous on the part of the Bulgarians!

Ottawa Free Press—Here are those dinky Malay states giving a cruiser for the empire's navy and we never heard a word of talk from there. We believe, too, that Canadian navy eloquence has circled the globe many times.

Toronto Star—The opponents of home rule for Canada burned down the parliament buildings and mobbed the governor-general. The opponents of home rule for Ireland are of the same violent temper and show the same hatred of freedom, law and order.

Charlottetown Guardian.—Instead of looking for causes for war it would be more profitable to look for the folly and the utter impossibility of a war between Germany and Britain, neither of which would have anything to gain but everything to lose in such a mad undertaking.

Hamilton Spectator—If the house of commons, through a snap vote, take action which is contrary to the wish and will of the majority, why should not the majority be allowed to reverse that action? If there is no precedent for such a reversal, it is a case of precedent being opposed to common sense.

London Advertiser—All the combinationists in Canada are great lip-loyalists because it pays. They traded in the sentiment of loyalty successfully in order to defeat the reciprocity agreement, which would have pinched the food combines. But any proposal to reduce duties on British imports shows that their imperialism is located in their pocket books.

Toronto World—There are 3,000 people dying of consumption in Ontario every year. A number of gentlemen are getting a million dollars together as a memorial to King Edward to assist in stamping out this plague. Up to date there has only been discovered one man who lifts his voice against the effort. He will be thought about at 3,000 funerals next year.

How to Grow Tall.

A man's organs and those of which are not subjected to grow continuously until he years old—that is to say, should become stronger, the of the lungs increase and should develop steadily until the decade of life. Also one should larger hat at the age of forty. A man ceases to grow ever, at the beginning of the decade, because after that time the forward pressure exerted by the the body while in the erect compresses the vertebrae bones in the spine, the disks large between them, the pelvic thigh bones, and this pressure comes the natural elasticity, disks and the growth of the. However, a British scientist that were man a quadruped a fore freed from the downward pressure produced by his weight spinal column he would grow in height for ten years than he does at present, sin been found that bones not sin compression increase up to the decade.—Chicago Tribune.

Altogether there are thirty-two pensioners in connection with the diplomatic services, whose yearly allowance range from $200 paid to Rev. F. R. Elliot, former chaplain at the Athens Legation, to $8,500 paid to such ex-Ambassadors as the Rt. Hon. Sir H. M. Durand, Sir E. H. Egerton, Sir F. C. Lascelles, Sir H. Rumbold, and the Rt. Hon. Sir C. S. Scott—men who have rendered the country valuable service in the diplomatic world.

Perhaps the most curious item in the bluebook giving particulars of pensions drawn by ex-Government servants which has recently been issued is that concerning a storekeeper of Sierra Leone, who, since April 1st, 1854, has been drawing a compensation allowance of $200 a year after twelve years' service at a salary of $900 per annum. He, however, is by no means the oldest pensioner on the Government books. Sixty-one years ago there was a moneyer's apprentice in the Mint who was then nineteen years of age, and his particular department of work being abolished, he was granted a compensation allowance of $750 a year, which sum he has been drawing ever since.

Australia's Kipling.

Lindsay Gordon, the poet of Australia, has been compared with Rudyard Kipling. Adam Lindsay Gordon was born in the Azores, October 19, 1833. At the age of seven he was sent to Cheltenham on the very day the college opened.

After a year he disappeared, and we see him again six years later as cadet of the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich. He was the friend and fellow of Gordon of Khartoum. At the end of three years he left. Then he was sent to the Royal Grammar School at Worcester. Up to then he had filled in his time learning French poetry, and frequenting boxing saloons and racing stables.

He signalized his connection with Worcester by stealing a mare and riding her at a steeplechase. Then he had another year at Cheltenham; when, as a result of actions that perturbed a good Puritan home, he was shipped to Australia; entered the South Australian Police, trained horses, got into Parliament.

Finally he failed, and died in poverty. But fame has followed his death, and now every Australian home knows his work, because he sang the normal life of a new community.

Some Words Beginning With H.

Most persons aspirate the initial letter of "humble" nowadays and write "a humble" just as they write "a humbug" or "a humming bird." But there are very many who would not naturally sound an h in "humble" or in "herb," "hospital," "homage" or even "humor." Before the nineteenth century nobody did, though it is clear that the aspirate had become regular by "David Copperfield's" time, from the fact that Dickens harps on Uriah Heep's "humble." The insistence on the h is comparatively modern. Medieval men not only said "abit" for "habit," but wrote it so, and the Bible has an "Hebrew."—London Standard.

by Arctic and Antarctic expeditions, and she has supplied many of these with dogs from her kennels.

Blackwood's Magazine.

Not long after the "Quarterly" was published, Blackwood had decided to establish a Tory periodical as a counterblast to The Edinburgh Review and its Whiggism. This appeared as The Edinburgh Monthly Magazine, under the editorship of Pringle and Cleg-horn, two incapable persons who soon deserted, leaving the publisher to seek the aid of Lockhart and Wilson, rising men who became respectively the biographer of Scott and his son-in-law, and "Christopher North," the great rival of Jeffrey as a critical slasher.

The first attempt came to an end, but in 1817 "Blackwood's Magazine" appeared, and Mrs. Oliphant, the historian of the House, draws a delightful picture of the eager and ambitious young editor hastening home and presenting the first copy to his wife with the words: "There is that which will give you what is your due, what I always wished you to have."

But there was tribulation before the publisher by reason of the famous satire upon the celebrities of Auld Reekie, known as the "Chaldee Manuscript," a piece of violent and high-spirited fun written after the manner of the Scriptures. Legal threats followed, and probably swallowed up the profits of an enormous sale.

Later came "North's" attacks on Wordsworth and "The Cockney School," with Leigh Hunt at the head. It was foolishly said that Blackwood's review helped to kill Keats. If this were so (then or now) few authors would survive their first book.—T.P.'s Weekly.

Literary M.P.'s.

In the days of pocket-boroughs a man of letters could go into Parliament as the nominee of some great land-owner, and do his duty to the Government, or against it. Looking back to the early years of the eighteenth century, Steele and Addison stand out conspicuously on the Tory side, and later Sheridan and Edmund Burke are very prominent amongst the Whigs. (Gibbon, too, sat in the House of Commons—a silent supporter of the Tories.) But with the rise of a popular electorate and a national elementary education it has become by no means easier for a bookman to get into Parliament, and often enough it is rather in spite of a literary reputation than because of it that a man of letters wins the favor of his constituency. The universities are no exception, though the names of Lecky, Dr. Jebb, Prof. Pulteney, and Sir William Anson may be cited as evidence that men of learning are sometimes elected to the House of Commons by the Masters of Arts, who enjoy special representation at Westminster. It would be a difficult job to find four M.P.'s in the nineteenth century of the high literary rank of Steele, Addison, Burke, and Sheridan.—Joseph Clayton, in T.P.'s Weekly.

St. John Telegraph and Sun—The consumers in the prairie Provinces are of course opposed to the duty, for it is claimed they could get rough lumber which is so greatly needed for building operations about $2.00 per thousand less than if they were compelled to buy from the manufacturers in British Columbia. It may be assumed, however, that the Government will stand by the manufacturers.

Sault Star—Hon. Mr. Crothers, the Minister of Labor, has refused to appoint a board of conciliation and investigation, as the C. P. R. employees have requested. His reason for the refusal is that the C. P. R. Company had shown a willingness to make concessions, and that he hoped to be able to arrange a settlement without the delay that would be occasioned by the investigation of an official board. But the wisdom or unwisdom of the Minister's action must be judged by results. He has failed to arrange a settlement through his own exertions, and he has failed to avert a strike. The strike would have been averted by the appointment of a board of investigation. Mr. Crothers assumed a serious responsibility when he refused to comply with the request of the C. P. R. employees, and it is not unreasonable to hold him personally responsible for this strike.

Saw Him In Prison.

A Glasgow magistrate, presiding at one of the city police courts, asked a prisoner one question too many. The prisoner, who was charged with breach of the peace, pleaded guilty, and before pronouncing sentence the magistrate looked at him closely, and asked—"Where have I seen you before?" Prisoner—"I don't know, your honor." Magistrate—"Now, look at me and tell me where you have seen me before." The prisoner looked into the magistrate's face and replied—"I think it must have been in prison, sir."

PECAN CAKES—Use two eggs, one cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of flour, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of baking-powder and two cupfuls of chopped pecans. Make a dozen and a half cakes in a shallow gem-pans, lay half a pecan on each cake, and bake them for twelve to fifteen minutes in a moderate oven.

ENGLISH GINGERBREAD—Rub one-quarter of a pound of beef dripping into one pound of flour. Add two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of baking-powder, one-half cupful of hot milk, one cupful of molasses, and one-half ounce of caraway seeds. Mix these ingredients well; pour the batter into a well-greased pan, and bake it in a moderate oven for half an hour.

PORK BALLS—They cost little and are easily made. Chop half a pound of lean pork, and add to it pepper, salt, a slice of bread soaked in milk, and an egg with the white and yolk beaten separately. Mix well. Form balls by rolling about a teaspoonful of the mixture upon a well-floured board. Melt butter in a pan, and when it sizzles put in the balls and fry. Serve them on a hot dish, with pickles cut into rounds.

VERMONT JOLLY BOYS—Delicious breakfast cakes are made as follows: Sift together three and one-half tablespoonfuls of corn-meal, two and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, one heaping tablespoonful of sugar, and three-quarters teaspoonful each of salt and baking-powder. Beat one egg and add to it the dry mixture, with enough sweet milk to make a drop batter; quickly stir in one-half teaspoonful of melted butter; drop the batter by small spoonfuls in hot lard, and fry it to a rich brown.

APPLE-CRANBERRY SAUCE—Use one quart of cranberries and two large apples—or three small ones. Pick over the cranberries, quarter and core the apples, but do not peel them. Wash both apples and cranberries, and put them in a kettle with a little water—enough to show, but not enough to cover the fruit. While it is boiling add a pinch of soda and a pinch of salt. Cook until the apples are tender, then rub everything through a strainer. Add one and a half cupfuls of sugar, or a sufficient amount to suit the taste.

CARROLL COUNTY POTATO FRITTERS—Boil, peel and mash two pounds of white potatoes; add one-half cupful of granulated sugar, one teaspoonful of baking-powder, and salt to suit the taste. Beat these seasoned potatoes, and add slowly one-half pint of milk, stirring meanwhile until the mixture is smooth and white. Then add enough flour to make a thick batter, and fry in deep, hot lard. When the cakes are golden brown, take them from the pan and serve them on a hot platter. This recipe makes enough potato fritters for a family of four.

The second session of the Canadian Parliament under the new constitution is upon us and in the have passed Ottawa has seem as if it had always capital. But for five years enjoyed the distinction of capital of Canada—not of the old union, but of the old union, consisted of the two provinces and Lower Canada, and expired February 10, 1841, to July. From the spring of 1844 to 1849, Montreal was the seat of the Government of United Canada.

When the union was formed, Lord Sydenham organized the Government, Kingston was the capital, and Parliament building now forming the core of the Kingston General Hospital. For two sessions were held of continuing Kingston as the seat of government. The capital was acceptable except the inhabitants of the its neighborhood. The numerous localities were considered even a claim was put forward by Johnston, member for Carleton Place, as Ottawa was the best. In the end Bytown won, but Montreal and Toronto and Quebec were tried in succession.

The motion advising the transfer of the seat of Government from Kingston to Montreal was made by Baldwin and seconded by Sir John A. Macdonald. On the day, on November 23, 1857, the exception of one member, Sir Charles Metcalfe, the General, favored it, but it was in both Houses by the Unionist Tories. In the Legislature the Opposition was determined. When the resolution on thirteen Tory Councilors up their hats, bowed to the and left the Chamber. The was adopted, and was acted soon as practicable.

Soon after the opening of the following spring, government offices were removed from Kingston to Montreal, and in the course of summer the Governor also removed his headquarters from Alwington House, on the outskirts of Kingston, to Mount Royal, on the southwestern slope of the mountain that culminates on Mount Royal. The building that was the vice-regal residence was burned in the 1893, and on its site now stand the buildings of the Sisters of the Good Will.

The Houses of Parliament Government offices were housed in a large but by no means imposing building that occupied the ground of what is now d'Youville Park, near the foot of McGill Street, which is best remembered by the present generation as the site of the old Market. The market was put on a number of years ago, at the centre of the square, to create removal of the old building, a monument commemorating

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)
Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.
My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.
We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

General Booth's Stick.
The walking-stick of General Booth used on the last walk he ever took has a little history of its own. At a meeting in Paris some time ago a notorious Russian anarchist was converted by the general's eloquence, and soon after the latter's return to England he received from his convert a piece of string, with the request that a knot might be tied in it to show the length of the walking-stick the General usually carried. The string was knotted accordingly and returned to Paris, and a little later this stick arrived in London, a present from the grateful convert and the work of his own hands.

In order to protect and administer the Dominion Forest Reserves to the best advantage, they are being subdivided into ranger districts and houses are being built at strategic points for the use of the rangers in charge. The first of such houses to be occupied on the Duck Mountain Forest Reserve is located at Madge Lake, a few miles from Kamsack, Sask.

Madge Lake is a beautiful, island-studded sheet of water, covering seven square miles, and this ranger dwelling is picturesquely placed on its south shore. It is a comfortable house, well planned and well lighted, containing living rooms as well as office. It will be painted a dark green with white trimmings.

The trail from this ranger station to Kamsack will next year be widened and otherwise improved. This will benefit the ranger, convenience the public who have forest business to transact, and induce an increasing number of people to enjoy the many delights of a summer outing at Madge Lake.

The ranger at this station has direct charge some two hundred and thirty square miles of highly valuable, young second-growth spruce and poplar forest, and his central object and work will be to safeguard it from fire by every possible means, so that in two or three decades it may yield welcome and abundant supplies of fuel and lumber to the dwellers on the prairies.

The Fountain Pen.
The fountain pen is not an invention of recent years. In Samuel Taylor's "Universal System of Shorthand Writing," published in 1786, we find proof of the fountain pen's great age. "I have nothing more to add," wrote Samuel Taylor, "for the use or instruction of the practitioner except a few words concerning the kind of pen proper to be used for writing shorthand. For expeditious writing some use what are called fountain pens, into which your ink is put, which gradually flows when writing, from thence into a smaller pen cut short to fit the smaller end of this instrument, but it is a hard matter to meet with a good one of this kind."

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was fair and late cables were firmer, at an advance of 1½d, but the volume of business done was small. Cables on flaxseed were lower, but the bids for barley were steady.
The local trade in oats was quiet. Spring wheat flour was steady at the recent decline, with a fair volume of business doing. Millfeed is fairly active. Demand for butter continues good, and the shipments west by the C.P.R. for the months of September and October were 73 cars.
The Cheese is very quiet. Exports for the week were 58,162, against 55,496 last year.
Eggs firm. Dressed hogs 25c higher.
Corn—American, No. 2 yellow, 63c to 63c.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 16 were 2500 cattle, 2000 sheep and lambs, 2100 hogs and 550 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1650 cattle, 980 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 350 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today.
The offerings were somewhat larger than expected, and in consequence buyers held off to some extent during the early part market was purchased sixteen years ago, and in the square created by the old building, stands a monument commemorating the commissionneuve and the founding of the city in 1642.

Returning to the five years when the House of Commons contained the Houses of Commons of United Canada, let one episode, of which that old scene, be recalled—perhaps, unimportant in itself, but interesting because of its connection with them.

The election was held a few days after the removal of the seat of government to Montreal. The fight for the seat of government was now his election of 1844 resulted in a victory for the Tory party. That brought into public life a man who for years the pilot of the ship of state—John A. Macdonald, now returned to Parliament for the first time by the City of Montreal. The new Parliament of Canada was a member, met on Nov. 23, 1844. It was the first Parliament held in Montreal, in which the young Scotts-Whiston had a seat. The Parliamentary career then commenced, and with death forty-four years later, and shortly before the Government was removed to Montreal, Georges Etienne Carle, of the House, and so the man, who were to become political, found themselves thrown in public life.

Incidentally, General for Upper Canada Baldwin-Lafontaine Governor was William Hume Blake, brother of the Blake family of the late Earl of Devon, and the father of the late Lord Blake, who died recently. S. H. Blake, K.C., of Toronto.

The leaders of the Tory Opposition were Sir Allan MacNab, of the man, it will be remembered, brought reinforcements to the Bond Head when Toronto was threatened by the rebels with the aid of Montgomery's Taverner, 1837, and who also took part in the skirmish that crushed the rebellion. For many years MacNab was a prominent figure in public life, and for a long time Premier in the Government of Ontario.

MacNab in the last session was defeated by the Losses Bill, which was after a number of stormy days when the Earl of Elgin, Governor-General, of Ontario, was assented, the Houses of Parliament were attacked by a mob, set on fire and destroyed. The session ended on its close in another defeat, and in the following November the Government was re-elected.

MacNab's career as a politician was brief, but it was as brief.

Lunar Athletics.

The "man in the moon" must surely regard with amused contempt our much vaunted athletic records. A good terrestrial athlete could cover about 120 feet on the moon in a running broad jump, while leaping over the barn would be a very commonplace feat. He would find no difficulty in carrying six times as much and running six times as fast as he could on earth, all because the moon attracts bodies with but one-sixth of the force of the earth.

A WONDERFUL CASE

Three Months in Hospital and Came out Uncured,

Zam-Buk Cured Him in Few Weeks.

Mr. Fred Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N. B., says:—

"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. When the knee got warm, it burned worse, and the itching and burning and smarting were almost unbearable. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial.

"Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was quite cured.

"Since then Zam-Buk has cured blood-poison in my finger, and at a time when my finger was in such a terrible condition that I feared it would have to be amputated."

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, cold sores, chapped hands, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.

consisted of 1650 cattle, 380 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 350 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today. The offerings were somewhat larger than expected, and in consequence buyers held off to some extent during the early part of the day, with the expectation of buying cheaper than a week ago; consequently trade was rather slow. Drovers and dealers were firm in their views, and held out, which resulted in bringing buyers up to the market, and a good demand, with fairly good trade, followed. Choice steers were in demand, at from $6.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds. The demand for canning stock continues good, cows selling at $2 to $2.50, and bulls at $2.75 to $3.15 per 100 pounds.

Owing to smaller receipts of sheep and lambs, a stronger feeling prevailed in the market, and prices were 25c per 100 pounds higher than a week ago. Demand was good, and Ontario lambs sold at $6.50, and Quebec at $6 to $6.25, while ewe sheep brought $4 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.

The trade in calves was fairly active, at 2 1/2c to 3c for grass-fed stock, and at 5c to 7c per pound for milk-fed.

In spite of the recent weakness and the lower prices ruling in the Toronto market for hogs, a stronger feeling developed in the local market today, and prices advanced 25c to 40c per 100 pounds, as compared with last week. Selected lots sold at $3.75, and some lots coming from north of Toronto sold as high as $9 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $5.75 to $6.25; do., medium, $5.25 to $5.50; do., common, $3.50 to $4; canners, $2 to $3.15; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $4.75 to $5; do., medium, $4.25 to $4.50; do., bulls, $3.25 to $3.75; milkers, choice, each, $30 to $35; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $80; springers, $55 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culs, $3.50 to $3.75; lambs, $4 to $6.50.

Hogs, f.a.b., $3.75 to $9.

Calves, $3 to $12.

Mr. Kemp's $10 Dog.

Hon. A. E. Kemp is an enthusiastic automobilist. He has several cars, and he makes generous use of them. Like all motorists he occasionally has a mishap. Not long ago he was coming into the city from Jackson's Point with a party of friends, and he had the great misfortune to run over a dog. As soon as he realized what had happened, he promptly stopped the car and walked back to face the music. Two little children were ruefully surveying the carcass of the canine when he approached. "Is that your dog?" asked the M.P.

A little girl about six years old mustered up courage to answer a shy affirmative.

"Well, I guess I have killed it," said Mr. Kemp, and putting his hand in his pocket he pulled out a crisp ten-dollar bill (a fair price for a car load of the same breeds of pups) and handed the money to the child.

She took the money with some diffidence.

"Is the dog really dead?" she asked. "Oh, yes," said Mr. Kemp, putting all the sympathy he could in his voice, and patting the little one on the head, "I am very sorry; but you will be able to buy another now."

Then her face was wreathed in smiles.

"Oh, won't father be glad. He tried twice to poison him last week."

Mr. Kemp climbed back into his car amid the vociferous laughter of his friends.—Star Weekly.

North Bay Takes Hydro.

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 19.—North Bay electors voted yesterday for municipal ownership of the electric lighting plant, the Hydro-electric bylaw being carried by a majority of 473, while the ten-year franchise asked by the Nipissing Power Co., was snowed under by a majority of 537.

EX-CONVICT STATESMEN.

British Annals Show Several Remarkable Instances.

There are several instances in colonial politics where ex-convicts have risen to positions of eminence after their release from prison.

There is Sir Starr Jameson, Bart, C.B., better known, perhaps, as "Dr. Jim," who, as all the world knows, led the famous raid into the Transvaal in 1895, after the failure of which he was tried in London and sentenced to ten months' imprisonment. Less than ten years afterwards, in 1904, that is to say, he was chosen Premier of Cape Colony.

His was, of course, a political offence. So was that which caused Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, some time Premier of Victoria, to be branded as a felon. He was implicated in the Irish rebellion of 1848, a fact which was afterwards to gain him the enthusiastic support—and the votes—of all his compatriots in Australia when he elected to go in for politics.

Another Australian Premier who "did time" was Sir Charles Dibbs. He served a sentence in Darlinghurst Jail, Sydney, for contempt of court. Afterwards, when a turn of fortune's wheel made him Prime Minister of New Wales, he had to appoint a new governor of Darlinghurst. He selected the warden who had charge of him as a prisoner.

Edward Gibbon Wakefield, another famous Australian statesman, was actually at one time a convict, his offence being the abduction of an heiress, a fairly common crime in England seventy or eighty years ago, but one which the laws always regarded seriously and punished severely. The Australians of his day, however, were many of them ex-convicts or the descendants of such, and these did not regard his offence as reflecting on his honor in any way, while the romantic circumstances surrounding it gained him many sympathizers among the ordinary colonists. On his release these rallied round him, and before long he became the most powerful political personage in the sub-continent.

Yet another old convict who rose through politics to high honor in Australia, after having served out there the sentence of imprisonment passed on him, was Dr. O'Doherty. He was convicted and transported for treason, and on his release he became a popular hero. He sat in both Houses in the Queensland Parliament, and afterwards filled several high official posts in that colony.

Oily Petrels.

Various sea birds, especially petrels, contain a large amount of oil in their tissues, and for this reason are greatly valued by the inhabitants of the Scottish coasts, who use them "oil for their lamps, their beds, a delicacy for the balm for their wounds and for their distemper." On the St. Kilda as many as 20,000 are killed in the one week or when this killing is legal. Oil from some of these birds can be used as lamp oil, and are passed through the Live Stock Journal.

Early Welfare Work

The "sick fund" among employees was known as far back as the first quarter of the nineteenth century. A manufacturing company having established it for the benefit of its employees. A hospital for the sick was established in 1830. The charges were $4 for the men and $3 for the women. They were not able to pay, and the corporation became a failure.—New York Evening Post.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Albany, N.Y.,
Nov. 17.—As always, Pastor Russell got the crowds to-day. We report his discourse on Ministerial Ordination and Titles.
Very evidently it was intended to be a reply to an attack recently made upon him by a
Mr. W. T. Ellis, Field Editor of The Continent, and alias, the "Religious Rambler." Ellis claims that Pastor Russell's ordination as Pastor is fraudulent. The address shows that Pastor Russell fully understands the situation. He fully justifies his position before his vast audience and showed up the "Rambler" editor of being either ignorant of the subjects discussed, or of attempting to deceive the public. His text was, "Not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus raised Him from the dead." (Gal.
1:1.) He said:

The time has come for telling the people what the Bible teaches respecting clergy and laity, and ordination to teach and preach. The doctrine of Apostolic Succession started in the second century A. D. The bishops claimed that they had the same authority that Jesus gave to the twelve Apostles. Upon this claim they appointed and ordained the inferior clergy.

This principle is wholly unscriptural.
According to the Bible, the Church of Christ is not composed of two parts, clergy and laity. Jesus declared, "All ye are brethren; One is your Master, Christ." St. Paul shows that in the early Church the ministers were the servants of the flock. They were of the people; chosen by them by the stretching forth of the hand (Greek, cheirotoneo) and recognized as of Divine appointment to the ministry. All this was changed, the

Many of the reformers coveted the

THE LAST IN THE RACE

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Nothing that has occurred for a year past has so illuminated the inefficiency and vacillation of the Borden Government as the speeches of Premier Asquith and Rt.
Hon. Winston Churchill at the recent Guildhall Banquet. As a result of the shifty lack of policy Canada was shown up as a laggard in the Imperial navy race.

"What has made the year memorable in the history of the navy" said the First Lord of the Admiralty "has been the spontaneous and simultaneous movement of the great Dominion of the Crown toward active participation in Imperial defence."

The year began by the New Zealand Government placing their splendid battle cruisers at the disposal of the British Admiralty. It witnessed the steady development of the Australian fleet with a consequent relief to the British naval resources while announcement was recently made that the Australian Navy would automatically pass into the control of the British Admiralty in time of war.
All this was recounted with pride, and then came Canada's turn in the procession of the Dominions. But there was nothing to announce except "we may expect when the Canadian Parliament meets announcement of a policy worthy of the power and loyalty of that great Dominion." A ponderous platitude worthy of Mr. Borden himself. That is the net result of over a year of vacillating and dispute by Mr.
Borden and his coalition Cabinet.

In March, 1909, Mr. Borden could find so little fault with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Naval resolution that the only improvement he could suggest was the insertion of the word "Speedy" which was promptly accepted. Then the Laurier Government proceeded to act upon this unanimous resolution.
Vessels were purchased as training ships and a Naval College established so that when war-ships were secured there would be Canadian sailors to man them. Then tenders were called for a series of vessels whose construction would cover a period of ten years.
The plans were approved by the British Admiralty and tenders were submitted by the greatest ship-building arms of Great Britain. Everything was in train for the real work of constructing Canada's Navy, to be built as far as possible in Canada, controlled by the Canadian Government and manned by Canadian sailors, and like the Australian Navy, immediately available to Great Britain in case of war.

Then after one of the most discreditable campaigns in Canada's history,
the Laurier Government was defeated, and the word "speedy" promptly expunged from the Borden dictionary.

wind. With characteristic self-complacency the B. C. Premier not merely demanded that Canada should have an army and navy second to none in the world, but undertook to criticise Sir Wilfrid Laurier for not announcing his position with regard to the veterans Borden Naval policy. Perhaps the B. C. Knight is becoming impatient at his own leader's delay and feels that Sir Wilfrid ought to continue to guide
Canada's policy.

However, Sir Wilfrid has very clearly defined his policy. His Naval propositions were placed before the House and accepted until the Nationalists gained control of the Borden Government. If Mr. Borden has anything better to propose it will meet with Sir Wilfrid's support. If his alternative is not as good then it will be opposed in the interests of the Country and the Empire. That should be sufficiently clear for even Sir Richard McBride.

Ordination is necessary to the proper holding of the office of pastor. The question is, What constitutes an ordination to preach amongst the people of God?

This question has received various answers. The Roman, Anglican and Greek Churches, claiming Apostolic Succession, declare that authorization to preach come through their apostle-bishops, and have not allowed Protestant ministers to enter their pulpits—until the Episcopalians, about a year ago granted this concession. Of course, if their proposition were correct, I am just as much unordained as all other Protestant ministers—and no more so.

Each denomination at its beginning was opposed by all others; yet each taught that the clergy were separate from the laity. Only since the organization of the Evangelical Alliance (1846) have the different sects of Christendom acknowledged each other's ordinations. Each denomination makes use of such ceremonies as it deems proper. If, therefore, the congregation of Christian believers in Brooklyn and in London ordain or appoint me as their pastor, it is their own choice what ceremonies, if any, shall accompany that ordination. Who can dispute this? No Protestant denomination, surely; for their own ordinations are on this very basis.

The subject of ordination of ministers seems to have fallen into confusion during the Dark Ages; and few have gotten fully back to the Bible teachings on the subject. St. Paul particularly emphasizes the fact that he did not receive his commission as preacher and Apostle of Christ from his brother Apostles, but by Divine authorization.

No denomination claims that the ordination of its ministers either made or kept them perfect. All admit that there have been sad failures amongst their ordained ministers. Neither would they claim that ordination has given their ministers superior spirituality or discernment of Divine Truths. On the contrary, it has injured the clergy by making many of them domineering and lordly, contrary to the spirit of Christ and the Apostles and their teachings; and the laity by leading them to conclude that merely secular matters should engage their attention.

Citing the Apostle's exhortation to the Elders of Ephesus to feed the Flock of God over whom the Holy Spirit has made them overseers—by the Church selections—he declared that the word "overseer" here signifies bishop. The Elders were merely elder brothers in the Church—men of advanced spirituality, regardless of years, and expected to do a bishoping or pastoral work, feeding the Flock. Wrong views re ordination and a separate clergy class have reduced the Elders to the honorable service of lifting collections and passing the communion service.

available to Great Britain in case of war.

Then after one of the most discreditable campaigns in Canada's history, the Laurier Government was defeated and the word "speedy" promptly expunged from the Borden dictionary. In office he has been as slow as in opposition he was urgent. One of his first steps was to cancel the Laurier arrangement for the construction of a nucleus for the Canadian Navy. Of course it was announced that this was because the plans were disapproved by the Government. It would probably be more correct to say they were disapproved by the Nationalists, naval experts like Messrs. Monk, Nantel, and Pelletier finding the plan approved by the British Admiralty quite inefficient.

Thirteen months have passed and the only benefit that the naval dispute has been to the country is that it forced Hon. Mr. Monk to resign, and exposed to the obloquy of the nation the discreditable alliance by which the Nationalist-Conservative Government was formed.

That is the net result of over a year. Canada is lagging behind the rest of the Empire, far outdistanced by Australia and New Zealand whose Governments have never made such frantic boasting of hysterical loyalty but were able to give tangible proof of it. The record of the Borden Government on the navy question is equal to their efforts on the marriage question, infinite noise and bombast, infinite lack of action.

A LAST EMERGENCY.

Signs are multiplying through the Government organs that yet another twist has been given to the Borden kaleidoscope on the Naval question. It has been discovered that the only emergency in existence is that in the coalition Cabinet and that this is beyond the help of any contribution. The Nationalist lion refused to eat grass with the Jingo-Conservative lamb and the impasse seems as impressive as ever. It is really improper, not to say inconvenient, for British statesmen to so frankly take the public into their confidence, just when the Borden collection of opposites were getting the Canadian people accustomed to a policy of silent inaction. Impetuous young fellows like Asquith and Churchill have a lot to learn from Canada in the way of Government of the people by Government for the Government. Just when the emergency solatium was being worked to its best the British Prime Minister bobs up and not only says that there is no emergency but shows that there is none.

"It is a satisfaction," he said "to be able to assure you that so far as this country is concerned its relations with the other powers, without a single exception, were never more friendly and cordial. The great powers are working together with a closeness of touch and a frankness and freedom of communication which are remarkable." And on top of this comes the First Lord of the Admiralty who casually mentions that the British fleet has been reorganized, an entire squadron of powerful ships placed in full commission, that the largest number of sailors on record have been recruited, the sixth battle squadron intended for 1915 to be ready next year. The regular army in more efficient shape than ever before, actual navy co-operation from Australia and New Zealand, and hopes from Canada.

The hearts of the Ontario flag-floppers must rejoice at this success of their work.

McBRIDES MODEST DEMAND.

Sir Richard McBride's latest Naval outbreak at Ottawa has been compared by friendly journals to a "strong wind from the West." The simile is correct. Wind it was, and strong as provinces And Association" has been formed at Montreal, and already no less than sixty victims of the Borden guillotine have been found employment. In his Halifax platform Mr. Borden demanded the reform of the Senate and the placing of the Outside Civil Service under the Civil Service Commission. In his Ottawa practice he is trying to reform the Civil Service by dismissing as many Liberal employees as can be got rid of without disorganizing the service. Perhaps when he gets the Civil Service packed with his own friends he will remember the Halifax platform. In the meantime the Tory love of patronage is still working overtime.

SESSION WILL BE LIVELY.

With the opening of Parliament a little more than a week away, interest in the Session is becoming keen. When the first Borden Parliament opened there was not a word in the Speech from the Throne regarding the Navy question. This was not surprising since the Government had nothing to say and wanted nothing to do with it. But the opposition made ample amends for the neglect of the Government. Now it is announced by Government organs that Mr. Borden's Naval proposition—his "emergency" idea, not any permanent policy—will be brought down, with the probability of an appeal to the Country before any permanent policy is adopted. It is also stated that Mr. Borden's position will be in accordance with the policy he has adopted on numerous occasions. It can scarcely help being that since Mr. Borden has twisted through more complicated convulsions on this question than can be easily followed. The only way in which he can dodge all his previous positions is by doing nothing—which has been his programme for over a year.

It is intimated that the Highways Aid Bill will be re-introduced at this session. It was thrown out by the Senate last year after long debates, the Senate joining with the Liberal Opposition in the opinion that the whole Bill was a patent device to place patronage and improper influence in the hands of the Dominion Government. The Opposition demanded that the proposed money should be apportioned amongst the provinces according to population. Finally the Government agreed to the principle but refused to embody it in the Bill and they just obstinately refused any amendment which would prevent the money being used as a bribe to swing bye-elections, as was attempted in South Renfrew and confidently trusted that the popularity of the principle would carry it with the public. The Liberals did everything in their power to get the Bill through—but did their duty as a loyal opposition by insisting that it be put through in proper shape. There is no doubt that the Bill will be as sharply contested next session unless the needed reforms are made.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

At the same time D'Artagnan felt that Planchet slipped a note into his hand.

"I have a note," said he to Athos and his friends.

"That's well," said Athos. "Let us go home and read it."

In the tent of D'Artagnan they lit a lamp, and while Planchet stood at the entrance, that the four friends might not be surprised, D'Artagnan with a trembling hand broke the seal and opened the letter.

It contained half a line in a hand perfectly British and of a conciseness as perfectly Spartan:

Thank you; be easy.

Athos took the letter from the hands of D'Artagnan, drew near to the lamp, set fire to the paper and did not leave hold of it till it was reduced to ashes.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Fatality.

IN the meantime Milady, drunk with passion, had been tempted to throw herself into the sea that she might regain the coast, for she could not get rid of the idea that she had been insulted by D'Artagnan and threatened by Athos and had left France without having her revenge. Nine days after leaving the Charente, pale with fatigue and vexation, Milady saw only the blue coast of Finisterre appear. On the very day that Planchet embarked at Portsmouth for France the messenger of his eminence entered the port.

All the city was agitated by an extraordinary movement—four large vessels, recently built, had just been launched. Standing on the jetty, his clothes richly lined with gold, glittering, as was customary with him, with go no further unless you tell me whether you are taking me."

This threat obtained no reply.

"Oh, but this is outrageous!" cried Milady. "Help, help, help!"

No voice replied to hers. The carriage continued to roll on with rapidity. The officer appeared a statue.

Milady resumed herself, foaming with rage. The officer leaned forward, looked at her in his turn and appeared surprised to see that face but just before so beautiful distorted with passion and become almost hideous. The artful creature at once comprehended that she was injuring herself by allowing him thus to read her soul. She collected her features and in a complaining voice said:

"In the name of heaven, sir, tell me if it is to you, if it is to your government, if it is to an enemy I am to attribute the violence that is done me?"

"No violence will be offered to you, madame, and what happens to you is the result of a very simple measure which we are obliged to adopt with all who land in England."

At length, after a journey of near an hour, the carriage stopped before an iron gate, which inclosed an avenue leading to a castle severe in form, massive and isolated. Then, as the wheels rolled over a fine gravel, Milady could hear a vast roaring, which she at once recognized as the noise of the sea dashing against some steep coast.

The carriage passed under two arched gateways and at length stopped in a large, dark, square court. After alighting with Milady the officer drew from his belt a little silver whistle. He whistled three times. Immediately several men appeared, who unharnessed the smoking horses and put the carriage to meet the future. At all events, she congratulated herself upon having fallen into the hands of her brother-in-law, with whom she reckoned she could deal very easily.

"You were, then, determined to come to England again? Why?" said Lord de Winter.

"Come for? Why, to see you," replied Milady.

"What tenderness, my sister!"

"Why, am I not your nearest relation?" demanded Milady, with a tone of the most touching ingenuousness.

"And my only heir, are you not?" said Lord de Winter in his turn, fixing his eyes on those of Milady.

"I do not comprehend, my lord," said she, to gain time and make her adversary speak out. "What do you mean to say? Is there any secret meaning concealed beneath your words?"

"Oh, no," said Lord de Winter, with an apparent bonhomie.

"I think it astonishing that you should be aware of my coming."

"And yet that is the most simple thing in the world, my dear sister. I am commandant of the port. We shall see each other every day."

"Am I then to remain here eternally?" demanded Milady, with terror.

"Do you find yourself ill lodged, sister? Tell me on what footing your household was established by your first husband, and, although I am only your brother-in-law, I will arrange it upon a similar one."

"My first husband!" cried Milady, looking at Lord de Winter with eyes almost starting from their sockets. "You are joking!"

"Do I look as if I were?" asked the baron, rising and going a step backward.

and say to you: Friend Felt my child, guard me, and more particularly guard yourself against man, John Felton, I put his loyalty."

"My lord," said the young summoning to his mild countenance the hatred he could find in it. "My lord, I swear all shall be as you desire."

"She is not to leave this understand, John. She is not to spend with any one, she is to be no one but you—if you will do honor to address a word to me now, madame, try to make y with God, for you are adj men!"

Milady let her head sink as ed by this sentence. Lord de Winter went out, making a sign to who followed him, shutting after him and leaving Milady reflections.

In the meanwhile the cardinal anxiously for news from England no news arrived. La Rochelle held out, but it was known that the king had no hope but in Buckingham.

The cardinal looked, then, with impatience for the news from which would announce to Buckingham would not come.

The question of carrying the assault, though often debated in council of the king, had been rejected.

But an inhabitant of Rochelle had contrived to pass the river entered the city, coming from the mouth, and said he had seen the fleet ready to sail within

This unexpected circumstance back Richelieu's former in and forced him in spite of his more to turn his eyes to the of the sea.

During this time the royal a joyous life, neither provoking money being wanting in the the corps rivaled one another.

One day Aramis received a cousin" a letter, which he read to his three friends. It said:

My Dear Cousin—I think I have up my mind to set out for France. My sister has placed our little child in the convent of the Carmelites. The child is quite resigned, as she cannot live elsewhere without the loss of her soul being in danger. Meanwhile she is not very happy. What she most desires is a letter from you. I know that such sorrows pass with difficulty through gratings; but, after all, as I have your proofs, my dear cousin, I am skilled in such affairs, and I charge of the commission. Thanks you for your good and remembrance. She has experienced inquietude, but she is now a little reassured, having sent her yonder in order that nothing unexpected.

Adieu, my dear cousin! Let from you as often as you can say, as often as you can with embrace you. MARIE

"Oh, what do I not owe to you?" said D'Artagnan. "Stenay, Athos!"

"Why, a few leagues from the frontiers of Alsace, in Lorraine. Once over, we shall be able to tour in that direction."

CHAPTER XXXVII

First and Second Days of C

LET us return to Milady. We shall find her in a despairing attitude

All the city was agitated by an extraordinary movement—four large vessels, recently built, had just been launched. Standing on the jetty, his clothes richly laced with gold, glittering, as was customary with him, with diamonds and precious stones, his hat ornamented with a white feather which drooped upon his shoulder, Buckingham was seen surrounded by a staff almost as brilliant as himself.

Milady's ship entered the road, but as they drew near in order to cast anchor a little cutter, formidably armed, in appearance a coast guard, approached the merchant vessel and dropping its boat into the sea the latter directed its course to the ladder. This boat contained an officer, a mate and eight rowers. The officer alone got on board, where he was received with all the deference inspired by the uniform.

He then went up to the captain, again said a few words to him, and, as if from that moment the vessel was under his command, he ordered a maneuver, which the crew executed immediately. Then the vessel resumed its course, still escorted by the little cutter, which sailed side by side with it, menacing it with the mouths of its six cannon. The boat followed in the wake of the ship, a speck near the enormous mass. The officer who had stopped before milady might have been about twenty-five or twenty-six years of age.

When they entered the port it was already night. The officer desired to have milady's packages pointed out to him and ordered them to be placed in the boat. When this operation was completed he invited her to descend by offering her his hand.

Milady looked at this man and hesitated.

"Who are you, sir," asked she, "who have the kindness to occupy yourself so particularly on my account?"

"You may perceive, madame, by my uniform, that I am an officer in the English navy," replied the young man.

"But is it the custom for the officers in the English navy to place themselves at the service of their female compatriots, when they land in a port of Great Britain, and carry their gallantry so far as to conduct them ashore?"

"Yes, milady, it is the custom, not from gallantry, but prudence, that in time of war travelers are conducted to particular hotels in order that they may remain under the surveillance of the government until perfect information be obtained relative to them."

At the expiration of five minutes they gained the land.

The officer sprang out of the boat and offered his hand to milady. A carriage was in waiting.

"Is this carriage for us?" asked milady.

"Yes, madame," replied the officer.

"Very well," said milady. And she got resolutely into the carriage. The officer saw that the baggage was fastened carefully behind the carriage, and, this operation being performed, he took his place beside milady, and the carriage moved.

At the end of a quarter of an hour, however, surprised at the length of the journey, she leaned forward toward the window to see whether she was being conducted. Houses were no longer to be seen. Trees appeared in the darkness like great black phantoms running after one another.

"I beg you to understand, sir, I will in a large, square court. After alighting with milady the officer drew from his belt a little silver whistle. He whistled three times. Immediately several men appeared, who unharnessed the smoking horses and put the carriage into a coach house.

The officer then with calm politeness invited the lady to enter the house. She took his arm and passed with him under a low arched door, which by a vaulted passage, lighted only at the farther end, led to a stone staircase, turning round an angle of stone. They then came to a massive door, which after the introduction of a key into the lock by the young officer turned heavily upon its hinges and disclosed the chamber destined for milady. It was a chamber whose furniture was at once proper for a prisoner or a free man, and yet bars at the windows and outside bolts at the door decided the question in favor of the prison.

A man appeared in the opening. He was without a hat, wore a sword and carried a handkerchief in his hand.

The stranger advanced slowly. Milady involuntarily drew back.

"What, my brother," she cried in a state of stupor, "is it you?"

"Yes, fair lady," replied Lord de Winter.

"But this castle, then?"

"Is mine."

"I am your prisoner, then?"

"Nearly so."

Turning toward the door and seeing that the young officer was waiting for his last orders, Lord de Winter said:

"I thank you. Now leave us alone, Master Felton."

During the time that Lord de Winter took to shut the door, close a shutter and draw a chair near his sister-in-law's armchair, milady, anxiously thought-

"Come, come," said he, "I know you are accustomed to assassinate people."

This supposition appeared to her the most reasonable. It seemed that they wanted to revenge the past and not to almost starting from their sockets.

"You are joking!"

"Do I look as if I were?" asked the baron, rising and going a step backward.

"Or rather you insult me," continued she. "Leave the room, sir, and send me a woman!"

"Women are very indiscreet, sister. Cannot I serve you as a waiting maid? By that means all our secrets would be kept in the family."

"Insolent wretch!" cried milady, and, as if acted upon by a spring, she rushed toward the baron, who awaited her attack with his arms crossed, but one hand upon the hilt of his sword.

"Come, come," said he, "I know you are accustomed to assassinate people, but I shall defend myself."

"No doubt you would," said she. "You have all the appearance of being coward enough to lift your hand against a woman."

"Perhaps I have, and I have an excuse, for mine would not be the first man's hand that has been placed upon you, I imagine."

And the baron pointed with a slow and accusing gesture to the left shoulder of milady, which he almost touched with his finger.

Milady uttered a deep inward shriek and retreated to a corner of the room like a panther which draws back to take its spring.

"Oh, groan and shriek as much as you please," cried Lord de Winter, "but don't try to bite, for I warn you the thing would be to your prejudice. I have judges quite ready who will quickly dispose of a woman so shameless as, although already married, to come and marry my brother."

"Yes, I can very well understand that, after having inherited the fortune of my brother, it would be very agreeable to you to be my heir like wise, but know beforehand if you kill me or cause me to be killed my precautions are taken. Not a penny of what I possess will pass into your hands. But you must endure your captivity quietly. In fifteen or twenty days I shall set out for La Rochelle with the army, but before my departure a vessel, which I will see sail, will take you hence and convey you to our colonies of the south. And be assured that you shall be accompanied by one who will blow your brains out at the first attempt you may make to return to England or to the continent."

Milady listened with an attention that dilated her inflamed eyes.

"Yes, at present," continued Lord de Winter, "you will remain in this castle. The walls of it are thick, the doors strong and the bars solid, besides which your window opens immediately over the sea."

"The officer who commands here in my absence you have already seen and therefore know him. I give you leave to try your seductions upon this man. If you succeed with him I pronounce you the devil himself."

He went toward the door and called. The young officer entered.

"Now," said the baron, "look at this woman. She is young, she is beautiful, she possesses all earthly seductions. Well, she is a monster. She will endeavor to seduce you. Perhaps she will endeavor to kill you. I have extricated you from misery. This woman is come back again into England for the purpose of conspiring against my life. I hold this serpent in my power. Well, I call upon you

Then she made her face take expressions, from that of passion, which convulsed her features, that of the most sweet, most ate and most seducing smile.

A light appeared under the door. This light announced the reappearance of her jailers. Milady, who had been, threw herself quickly into the chair, her head thrown back, her beautiful hair unbound and disheveled.

The bolts were drawn, the door groaned upon its hinges, stepped in the chamber and drew in "Place that table there," said the voice, which the prisoner recognized as the voice of Felton. "Y bring lights and relieve the sentinels."

At length Felton, who had remained at milady, turned toward her. "Ah, ah!" said he. "She is conscious. Go and tell Lord de Winter that his prisoner has fainted."

The soldier went out to obey the orders of his officer. Felton remained upon the armchair, which chance near the door, and waited out speaking a word, without a gesture. Milady perceived who sat with his back toward her. She opened her eyes and looked deeply.

At this sign Felton turned round. "Ah, you have awakened madame!" he said. "Then nothing more to do here. If you anything you can ring."

"Oh, how I have suffered!" said milady.

Felton rose.

"You will be served thus, I three times a day," said he, "morning at 9 o'clock, in the evening at 3 o'clock and in the evening at 6 o'clock that does not suit you you can ring out what other hours you prefer."

"But am I to remain always a woman of the neighborhood been sent for."

"I thank you, sir," replied milady humbly.

Felton made a slight bow, corrected his steps toward the door at the moment he was about to leave. Lord de Winter appeared.

"Well, what's going on here he in a jeering voice. "Is this woman come to life again? Felton, my lad, did you not that the first act was being performed of a comedy? Has she not yet you, you heart of stone?"

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

"No, my lord," replied the impassible young man.

Lord de Winter passed his arm through that of Felton and led him out, laughing.

"I am lost!" murmured she when they were gone. "I am lost! I am in the power of men upon whom I can have no more influence than upon statues of bronze or granite. It is, however, impossible that this should end as they have decreed!"

Milady sat down to table, ate of several dishes, drank a little wine and felt all her resolution return. She believed Felton was, everything considered, the more vulnerable of her two persecutors.

In the morning, when they entered milady's chamber, she was still in bed, although she had slept well. Felton remained in the corridor. He brought with him the woman of whom he had book in his hand.

Milady reclined in an armchair near the chimney, beautiful, pale and resigned.

Felton approached her and said:

"Lord de Winter, who is a Catholic as well as yourself, madame, has consented that you should read every day the ordinary of your mass, and here is a book which contains the ritual of it."

Milady raised her head and looked more attentively at the officer. He was a Puritan. She had one of those sudden inspirations which people of genius alone have in great crises. This reply, ready arranged, presented itself to her lips:

"I!" said she, with an accent of disdain. "I, sir; my mass! Lord de Winter knows very well that I am not of his religion, and this is a snare he wishes to lay for me!"

"And of what religion are you, then, madame?" asked Felton, astonished.

"I will tell it," cried milady, with a feigned exultation, "on the day when I shall have suffered sufficiently for my faith! I am in the hands of mine enemies," continued she. "Well, let my God save me or let me perish for my God! That is the reply I beg you to make to Lord de Winter. And as to this book, you may carry it back and make use of it yourself."

Felton made no reply, took the book and retired pensively.

Lord de Winter came toward 5 o'clock in the evening.

"It appears," said the baron, "we have made a little apostasy."

"Explain yourself, my lord," replied the prisoner.

"Then you have no religion at all. I like that best," replied Lord de Winter, laughing.

"Oh, you need not avow your religious indifference, my lord! Your debaucheries and crimes would gain credit for it."

"What! You talk of debaucheries? Either I misunderstand you or you are pretty impudent!"

"You only speak thus because you know you are listened to, sir," coldly replied milady, "and you wish to interest your jokers and your hangmen against me."

"In eight days you will be where you ought to be, and my task will be completed," said De Winter.

"Infamous task! Impious task!" cried milady, with the exultation of a victim provoking the judge.

"Come, come, calm yourself, Mme. Puritan, or I'll remove you to a dungeon." And Lord de Winter retired.

Felton was behind the door and had not lost one word of this scene. Milady had guessed as much.

Silence was re-established, two hours passed away, milady's supper was brought in, and she was found deeply engaged in saying her prayers aloud, prayers which she had learned of an old servant of her second husband's, a most austere Puritan. Felton made a sign that she should not be disturbed.

Milady knew she might be watched, so she continued her prayers to the end. Then with her pure, harmonious and powerful voice, she began the psalm then in greatest favor with the Puritans:

Thou leavest thy servants, Lord,
To see if they be strong,
But soon thou dost afford
Thy hand to conduct them along.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The Third Day of Captivity.

FELTON had fallen, but still more must be done. He must be made to speak in order that he might be spoken to, for milady very well knew that her greatest seduction was in her voice.

With Lord de Winter her plan of conduct was more easy. To remain silent and dignified in his presence, from time to time by a contemptuous word to provoke him to threats and violence which would produce a contrast with her own resignation—such was her plan.

In the morning Felton came as usual, but milady allowed him to preside over all the preparations for the breakfast without addressing a word to him. At the moment he was about to retire she saw him make a powerful effort over himself. He sent back to his heart the words that were about to escape from his lips and went out.

Toward midday Lord de Winter came to her apartment. Milady was looking out at the window and pretended not to hear the door as it opened.

"I understand," said he, "you would like very well to be at liberty on that beach! Patience, patience! In four days' time the shore will be beneath your foot, the sea will be open to you."

Milady joined her hands and, raising her fine eyes toward heaven—

"Lord, Lord," said she, with an angelic meekness of gesture and tone, "pardon this man, as I myself pardon him!"

"Yes, pray accursed woman!" cried the baron. "Your prayer is so much the more generous from your being. I swear to you, in the power of a man who will never pardon you!"

At the moment he went out a piercing glance darted through the opening of the nearly closed door, and she perceived Felton, who drew quickly on one side to prevent being seen by her.

Then she threw herself upon her knees and began to pray.

The door opened gently. The beautiful supplicant pretended not to hear the noise, and, in a voice broken by tears she said:

"God of vengeance, God of goodness! Will you allow the frightful projects of this man to be accomplished?"

"I do not like to disturb those who pray, madame," said Felton seriously. "Do not disturb yourself on my account, I beseech you. Repentance becomes the guilty."

"Guilty! I?" said milady. "Say I am condemned, sir, if you please, but you know that God, who loves martyrs, sometimes permits the innocent to be condemned."

"Were you a martyr," replied Felton, "the greater would be the necessity for prayer."

"Oh, you are a just man!" cried milady, throwing herself on her knees at his feet. "I can hold out no longer, for I fear I shall be wandering in strength in the moment at which I shall be forced to undergo the struggle and confess my faith. I only ask you one favor, and if you grant it me I will bless you in this world and in the next."

"Speak to the master, madame," said Felton; "happily I am neither charged with the power of pardoning nor punishing. If you have merited shame, that? These gentlemen declared yes-

"Go and fetch Lord de Winter," said Felton.

"Oh, no, no!" cried milady. "I am well. I want nothing. Do not call him."

She gave so much vehemence, such prevailing eloquence to this exclamation, that Felton in spite of himself advanced some steps into the room.

"He is come," thought milady. She turned her beautiful head round upon her pillow, she burst into tears and uttered heartbreaking sobs.

Felton surveyed her for an instant with his usual impassibility; then, seeing that the crisis threatened to be prolonged, he went out. The woman followed him, and Lord de Winter did not appear.

"I fancy I begin to see my way,"
 murmured milady.

Two hours passed away.
 "Now it is time that the malady should be over," said she.

In the morning when the woman and Felton came they had brought her breakfast. Now she thought they could not be long before they came to clear the table and that Felton would then come back.

Milady was not deceived. Felton reappeared, and, without observing whether she had or had not touched her repast, he made a sign that the table should be carried out of the room.

Felton remained behind. He held a

 But the day of our liberation
 Will come, just and powerful Sire!
 And if it cheat our expectation
 To death and martyrdom we can still

This verse, into which the terrible enchantress threw her whole soul, completed the trouble which had seized the heart of the young officer. He opened the door quickly, and milady saw him appear, pale as usual, but with his eyes inflamed.

"Why do you sing thus and with such a voice?" said he.

"I crave your pardon, sir," said my lady with mildness. "I forgot that my songs are out of place in this mansion."

"Yes, yes," said he; "you disturb—you agitate the people who inhabit the castle."

And the poor, senseless young man was not aware of the incoherence of his words, while milady was reading with her lynx's eyes the very depths of his heart.

"I will be silent then," said milady, casting down her eyes.

"No, no, madame," said Felton; "only night."

And at these words Felton, feeling that he could not long maintain his severity toward his prisoner, rushed out of the room.

"What! You are ignorant of Lord

"I am unacquainted with them."

"Why, then," cried milady with an incredible tone of truthfulness—"why, then, you are not his accomplice. You do not know that he destines me to disgrace?"

"You are deceived, madame," said Felton, blushing. "Lord de Winter is not capable of such a crime."

"Good!" said milady to herself.
 "Without knowing what it is he calls it a crime!"

Americans and Soap.

There is a serious absence of cake soap from the hotels on the tourist belt of west Scotland, and nearly all of the soap supply is in liquid or powder form. A correspondent of the London Chronicle reports that the spray and the trickle were safeguards against the Yankees. No American tourists, he was told, can see a hotel cake of soap without putting it in his pocket, provided he is unobserved. "They are a splendid people to deal with," said one of the hotel keepers, "but unchained, portable soap is their undoing."

"That matter of soap is one of the international quarrels of manners," observes the Chronicle. "The whitest American is as dishonest about a cake of soap as the blackest of his compatriots is about chickens. He will steal anybody's cake of soap."

"And just across the channel you find countries where you carry your own soap and would as soon think of a public cake of soap as of a public toothbrush."

When Right Seemed Wrong.

Brown, a stranger in a Canadian city, stopped a pert looking newsboy and asked directions to a well known park. He grew wrathful as he repeated the urchin's instructions.

"Take any old street car," Brown echoed.

"Yes."

"And at the end of the line change to the first young street car. Is that what you said?"

"Yes," answered the boy, with a grin. Then he shied off at the gentleman's gesture toward his cheek.

"You'd better run," Brown called after him. "You needn't try your smart tricks on me or I'll thrash you." He walked away, stopped at a newsdealer's to buy a city guide and found the directions to the park as follows: "Take any Olde street car to end of line, then change to Yonge."—New York Press.

When Hoops Began.

When were hoops "in" for the first time? According to Strutt, "trundling the hoop is a pastime of uncertain origin, but much in fashion at present" (1801). Dr. Murray's dictionary, incidentally remarking that the original hoop affected by boys was a barrel hoop, gives no English reference to it earlier than 1702. But the hoop was well known to ancient Greek and Roman boys, who called it a "trochus" (wheel). Their hoops were made of bronze, and representations of them on gems show that they were driven by a little hook with a wooden handle, very like the modern boy's hoop stick. This was called by the Greeks "elater" (driver) and by the Romans "clavis" (key). Sometimes the ancient hoop had bells attached to it.—London Mail.

KITCHEN UTENSILS.

What to Consider When Purchasing These Useful Articles.

Perhaps no one class of articles is bought by the consumer with less knowledge than kitchen utensils. This is so because, contrary to the past opinions on the subject, there is so much to know—so much, in fact, that one would have to be a metallurgist, proficient in the science of metals, to know exactly the ways and wherefores of buying this kind of necessities.

Because this is a necessity—this knowledge of how to buy utensils for the kitchen—this list, in nothing really istic absolutely essential to or womanhood, and it is not a day. It is the result of patting and training through all years of babyhood and childhood.

Attractive personal ways, a responsibility, the care of clothes and so forth should be inculcated in early life. To do so should be given every day to child to help himself.

The riming dictionary
Is handy at a pinch,
For words are so contrary
The poet has no cinch.
And he has lots of trouble,
As you may well opine,
To make the riming double
On every other line.

He doesn't mind the meter.

He has to do some biting
Upon his pencil's end.
So he must do some gleaning
And words from nowhere hatch
To juggle out his meaning
And make the riming match.

Points to Consider.

Sanitation—Non-poisonous, non-absorbent and inability to impart flavor or color.

Durability—Conductivity of heat, resistance to high temperature, simplicity of construction—seamlessness—and non-liability to rust.

Convenience in handling—Weight, means of handling and means of storing.

Materials in order of structure—Silver, copper, nickel plate, iron, cast or wrought or steel (enameled, tinned, nickel, plain, japanned, galvanized, pewter or britannia metal (largely tin), aluminum, glass, porcelain, earthenware (French fireproof, white, yellow or red), fiber and wood.

Several of the very latest kitchen utensils are shown in this cut. The egg slicer is a particularly useful convenience to the cook. The vegetable cutter has for a recommendation the great advantage over the old one of being easily cleaned, as it is made of steel, glass and wood. An apple corer and slicer and coffee strainer and drip are among the other new things.

Christmas Trifle.

Have a hair receiver in every chamber of your home if you would keep it free of the vagrant hairs which are left on the toilet tables because no one knows how to dispose of them. An easily made receiver of rather original shape is constructed of a quarter yard sash width strip of ribbon, joined invisibly at the ends, and at one side gathered closely to form a bottom which may be finished with a tassel or bow of silk. At the top edge the ribbon should be caught over a bracelet of metal or celluloid and then bordered with a fancy gimp matching the shade of a cordage hanger. Exceedingly pretty hair receivers are made of moire or heavy satin, embroidered with metallic threads and trimmed with silver or gold tassel, lace and cording. All over metallic lace veiling silk is effective and so is valenciennes, venise or baby Irish over colored satin. Charming receptacles have been evolved from sheer linen, inset with lace medallions, embellished with hand embroidery and enlivened with streamers and bow-knots of satin ribbon.

It is not fair to a small child for the parents or nurse to be careless about the little things that develop thoughtfulness, self reliance and self control in a child. Self control is a character-

In many Canadian institutions this ceremony has always been preceded by the members of the fraternity taking the new "brother" "putting him through" or "him ride the goat," that is, he led on from one member to each ordering him to perform stunts, so that he passes a very evening. The "stunts" are varied and as can be devised score of active student brains, though the older members of ternity have fixed things with lice and with the various whom the initiate is likely to be, of course, is unaware of the passes through a veritable hell.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

Farm and Garden

MAKING HOME ATTRACTIVE.

Farmers Have the Materials For Beau- tifying Right at Hand.

Neat, conveniently arranged build- ings, a well kept lawn attractively bordered with trees and shrubs add greatly to the appearance and value of the farm and to the happiness of its occupants, says a bulletin of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station on "Planning and Adorning the Home- stead."

The farmstead, including as it does the general area occupied by the farm buildings, house and lawn, is the center of activity for the farm. Its planning and development, both from the standpoint of convenience and of securing an attractive landscape effect, deserve special consideration.

Photograph by Long Island agricultural experiment station.

PRETTY APPROACH TO A FARMHOUSE.

A well thought out plan is the first requisite to get these results, as in the absence of a definite scheme serious mistakes are likely to be made. This plan should include the location of buildings, drives, walks, trees, shrubbery, and every other feature which contributes either to the convenience or ornamentation of the place. It should be developed with the larger relationships always in mind.

The location of the house and farm buildings is the first consideration. Even though it happens that some or all of these are already on the ground, a plan for their location is important. New farm homes are erected to sup- plant old ones and other new farm structures are added, which make prac- ticable a general consideration of the entire building scheme. Material im- provement can often be made in a farmstead by a readjustment as new buildings are put up, though the best results are obtained where things are planned right from the start.

beef scraps, one-half pound of linseed meal and one pound of clover or alfalfa meal. This is sufficient grain for 100 pounds live weight of fowls per day. With this should be given in separate boxes an abundance of grit, oyster shell, charcoal and clean fresh water. Mangels may be given to supply a further amount of succulent food if necessary.

The birds should be given ample yard room and compelled to take plenty of exercise. Scattering grain in the litter in the morning, which necessitates the birds scratching for their meal, will serve as a valuable aid. The custom of giving the birds a wet mash in the morning has now gone completely out of vogue, and with good reason. The consensus of opinion at the present time is that the dry mash is much more desirable. Dry mash fed in hop- pers can be handled more easily and at less expense than the wet mash. A dry mash that will give good results is composed of the following:

Wheat brand, two parts by weight; mid- dings, one part by weight; corn meal, one part by weight; linseed meal, one part by weight; alfalfa or clover meal, one part by weight; beef scraps, one part by weight.

This should be placed in a hopper and kept before the birds all the time. Where the dry mash is provided whole or cracked corn and wheat should be fed in the litter in the morning and at noon.

Cleanliness in the poultry house is at all times important, but especially so during the fall and winter, when the fowls are unable to obtain free range. The dropping boards should be cleaned frequently and fresh litter supplied. A great factor in establishing sanitary conditions is the application of white- wash.

STORAGE OF CELERY.

Trench Method Is One Way of Pre- serving This Vegetable.

There are many ways of storing celery. Some of the large growers pack in the field, use large crates and send direct to city storage houses. Others have special storage houses on the farm in which the crop may be held until midwinter or even later. Pits are often used by growers who do not make a specialty of this crop.

One of the most successful plans is to store in trenches. Storage may be- gin after the middle of October and the work should be completed before there is hard freezing weather. In most sections of the north the crop should be stored before the 10th or 15th of November.

The trenches should be about a foot wide and deep enough to receive the plants so that the tops will protrude not more than two or three inches above the top of the trench. The plants are moved to the trenches as promptly as possible after lifting, stood erect and placed as close together as the roots will permit. Some loose soil about the roots in the trench improves conditions for satisfactory storage.

The tops should be free from dew or rain when trenched. Boards which were used in blanching the early crop are nailed together into troughs and placed over the trenched plants to pro- tect them from cold and rain. On warm days stones or blocks should be placed under the boards to provide ventilation. As the weather becomes

"IMPOSSIBLE TO HELP MY KIDNEYS"

Until I Used "Fruit-a-tives" Worlds Greatest Kidney Cure

Practically everybody in Toronto knows Professor J. F. Davis. For years, the elite of that city has taken lessons from Prof. Davis in the art of Dancing and Deportment.

His constant activity gradually weak- ened his Kidneys, which calamity threatened to make him an invalid.

But read Prof. Davis' letter—

563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, ONT.

DECEMBER 29th. 1911

"I want to say that "Fruit-a-tives" is my only medicine, and has been for the past five years. Previous to that, I had been troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Disease, and had taken many remedies without satisfactory results. Noticing the advertisements of "Fruit-a-tives" I adopted this treatment altogether, and as everyone knows, I am now—and have been since taking "Fruit-a-tives"—enjoying the best of health."

THE PROBLEM.

THIS is the age of steel and steam; Likewise the age of steel and schema. Machines have caught us in a net; We don't know how to use them yet. We pull the throttle open wide And several miles a minute ride. The chasms wide and deep we span, But does it help the common man?

The trusts are with us here to stay— At least they do not go away— Though we implore and beg and scold And indignation meetings hold. In party platforms give them fits And to destroy them rack our wits. We own our wants they can supply, But do they help the common guy?

It is the problem of the age The powers we have produced to cage, To tame the big machine and make It plow and reap and sow and bake For all mankind the whole world through. Instead of for a favored few And tell the trust, however great, It is not bigger than the state.

This is the problem, but the how Is pretty big, you must allow. The big machine might pout and frown If it should get a calling down. The trusts are haughty and from choice Are almost deaf to reason's voice. But they must bow down at our feet And from our hands must learn to eat.

A Friend In Need.

WONDERFUL FARMING.

Dr. Russell of Columbia university says the island of Guernsey is just about the size of one-half of a government township, six miles square, and very much the same shape & divided diagonally, say, from the northwest corner to the southeast corner.
On this small territory 40,000 people and 6,000 cattle find subsistence. There's farming for you.

Hang Up the Scythe.

It is undesirable to leave a scythe lying about, yet it is equally difficult to find a suitable place to hang one.
To hang it on a nail is to risk dulling the blade, while to hang it in the crotch of a tree is detrimental to the tree's welfare. However, there is a way. Obtain a V shaped crotch from an old limb, cutting one fork about a foot in length and the other about six inches. The rear side of the long fork is then trimmed down slightly so that it can be nailed uprightly to a flat surface. This will form a permanent place for the scythe, where the blade will not get dulled nor a fruit tree be injured.—Farm and Fireside.

Around the Honey Makers.

Comb honey that is to be sent to a distant market should be shipped before cold weather, since the combs become extremely fragile when cold.

Change all failing or slow queens promptly and breed from the best you can secure, thus raising the standard of your stock step by step and improving the average year by year.

The young bees, hatched from Aug.
1 on, constitute the colony to be wintered, and for this reason it is wise to see that much brood is ready,
even if you have to resort to stimu-
lative feeding.

As a rule, bees cast a prime swarm as soon as the first queen cell is sealed unless prevented by bad weather; therefore the first young queen may be expected to emerge on the eighth day from the first swarm.

When the hives are well distributed in a certain space their inmates can be more easily handled. It seems to improve their disposition, especially if there are some trees, shrubs or the like about it. Robbing is not so prevalent, either, and the absence of that always helps to make bees better natured.

FALL POULTRY CARE.

Advice Given by the New Hampshire
Agricultural Experiment Station.

Feeds for laying hens in the fall should be of such a nature as to promote and aid molting and bring the fowls into a physical condition conducive to early laying. One of the principal feeds helpful to this end is oil meal, which tends to loosen the old feathers, put a gloss on the new ones and keep the birds healthy. A good molting ration will consist of three pounds of whole or cracked corn, two pounds of wheat, one-half pound of

are nailed together into troughs and placed over the trenched plants to protect them from cold and rain. On warm days stones or blocks should be placed under the boards to provide ventilation. As the weather becomes colder manure, straw or even soil should be thrown over the boards to furnish additional protection. The drainage around the trenches must be good to prevent loss from decay of the stalks.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Fertilizing the Orchard.

Barnyard manure is, in general, the best fertilizer for the orchard. It should be applied at the rate of a load to from three to five trees, at least once in three years. The use of commercial fertilizers is hardly advisable, except where careful experiment has demonstrated its value.

Scant Pattern.

"I think these skimpy skirts the women wear now are positively outrageous."

"It is plain that you have no drygoods bills to pay, Stebbins."

Union Lodge No. 9, A.F. & A.M., are arranging to give an At Home in their lodge rooms on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 11th, in commemoration of the centennial of the granting of their charter.

H. V. Fralick received word on Friday last of the death of his sister, Mrs. James M. Thayer, Janesville, Wis. Deceased, whose maiden name was Charlotte Fralick, daughter of the late Peter S. Fralick, Morven, spent her girlhood in Morven and, with her husband, removed to Janesville, Wis., about thirty years ago.

Jacob Vanalstine, a well known resident of Clarksville, passed away in the Kingston General hospital on Monday after but a few days illness. The late Mr. Vanalstine leaves besides his widow, fourteen children of whom eight are living, Messrs. Clinton and Clarence at home; Arthur, Switzerland; Percy, in the west; Misses Sarah, Toronto; Susie, in Western Ontario; Mrs. Granger, Canby, Minn. and Tena at home. The funeral took place on Thursday from his late residence.

A meeting will be held in the Agricultural Office, Napanee, at 1 o'clock Saturday, Nov. 30th, to talk over the advisability of forming a Holstein Breeder's Club for the Counties of Lennox and Addington. It is felt that a Breeder's Club would do much to stimulate the breeding of Holsteins, and breeders would be able to dispose of their surplus stock at much better prices. Some of the best Holsteins in Canada are at present owned in this county, and many of the leading cows of this breed have been bred and sold by local breeders. Every breeder of Holstein is asked to be present at this meeting, so as to organize a strong enthusiastic Club. If possible an annual sale will be held each Spring to dispose of surplus breeding stock.

Children's Aid Meeting.

The interest taken in the Children's Aid meeting held in the town hall on Tuesday evening, Nov. 9th, should be an encouragement to the members of this society. The chair was occupied by the President, Dr. Simpson, and the meeting opened with prayer by Rev. W. E. Kidd. Rev. Mr. Hubby, of Belleville, in his address dealt with the importance of looking after neglected children in time to prevent them growing into paupers or criminals, while Mr. Wrightmeyer, C. A. Inspector, gave some graphic accounts of cases he had dealt with in our immediate vicinity, where the surroundings are tended to degradation and vice. Both emphasized the great help the Children's Aid Society is doing in making good Canadians of scores of children and urging all true citizens to give hearty support to this important branch of philanthropic work. The pictures shown were an education of what can be done for neglected children. The vocal solos by Miss Paul, Miss Grieve and Mr. Wrightmeyer were very much appreciated. At the close Magistrate Rankin moved a vote of thanks to the speakers, the soloists, the accompanists, Mrs. Black and Miss Marion Paul, the Town Council for the use of the Town Hall, and the Ladies' Musical Club for the use of the piano. The motion was ably seconded by Rev. Kidd. An executive meeting will be held at four o'clock on Monday, Nov. 25th, in the Council Chamber.

One of the many difficulties which confront the Temperance worker, is the oft reiterated assertion, that where there is local or state prohibition there has been no improvement in the condition of affairs. A very convincing answer to this line of argument is afforded by the state of Kansas, which has been a "dry" state for some thirty years—more than a generation. According to the report of the attorney-general of Kansas, as quoted recently in the "Montreal Weekly Witness," that state has made rapid progress along lines of prosperity and moral reform. The poor farms of Kansas are for the most part unoccupied, for the proportion of paupers is one to every 3,000 persons. Illiteracy in the thirty years has decreased from 39% to 2%. Out of 105 counties, 87 have no insane, 51 no feeble minded and 96 no imbeciles. Many of the county jails are without any inmates and many counties for ten years have had no occasion to try a criminal case. As one of the objections often urged against prohibition is that the taxes would be very great without the income the government derives from the liquor traffic, temperance people cannot but rejoice at such a report. The saving in asylums, poorhouses and jails would more than make up any deficiency in the budget, if Kansas be taken as a typical case. With insanity and feeble mindedness on the alarming increase as they are in Ontario, according to the latest official reports, it is encouraging to temperance workers to see how greatly prohibition can decrease these two threats to the well-being of any state.

Appreciated.

At the last regular meeting of the Grace Methodist Official Board, it was moved by Mr. Gibbard and seconded by Mr. Vanalstine, that this Board express its satisfaction and thanks to the choir for their faithful services and for the most excellent music during the past year. The membership of this choir has kept up to the full capacity of space and the quality of the music leaves nothing to be desired.
The Leader, Organist, and all connected with it are to be commended.

Better Than the Best.

While it is generally admitted that The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, is the best family and farmer's weekly paper printed, the Publishers are determined to make it still better. They are sparing no expense to give their subscribers of 1912 bigger value than ever. Their beautiful picture, "Mother's Treasures," is a delightful subject for the home and it is safe to say that no one who receives a copy would part with it for double the money. No mistake can be made in sending one dollar for that great weekly paper for 1913. Every subscriber gets the picture, "Mother's Treasures," size 23 by 29 inches, free.
It is the biggest dollars worth offered to-day.

Farmer's Clubs.

At the recent convention of Farmer's Institute workers held in Toronto much interest centered in the work of Farmer's Clubs. These clubs are organized to bring the farmer into a more personal touch with his neighbors and the community in general. A meeting is held once or twice a month and at these meetings some matter of special interest is taken up by a speaker, followed by a general discussion from all present. The Farmer's Club encourages the formation of Plowing Matches, Cow-testing Associations, Egg Circles, and similar societies that have for their object the betterment of farm conditions. The Farmer's Club is a strong educational factor in any community, and reaches the young men as no other organization can. The meetings are generally held in the school-house. Flourishing clubs are now in existence at Adolphustown and Enterprise. Assistance in organizing Farmer's Clubs will be gladly given by Mr. G. B. Curran, of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Napanee. As a preliminary step the question of forming a club should be discussed with the neighbors, and if favorable a meeting should be called at which officers and directors are elected. It is to be hoped that half a dozen strong Farmer's Clubs will be formed this winter to cover the county.
